

Foresight for Security:

It is everybody's business

Foresight 2.0 Training and Capacity Development Workshop

The nature of security has changed dramatically. So much so that 'security' now demands new language, updated perspectives and fresh thinking. Novel security issues are emerging from the interplay of technology, communications, geo-politics, geo-economics, climate change, ethics and cultural imperatives.

Security in this broader sense is everybody's business... everywhere, whether dealing with one or more of its five domains (see sidebar) or active in one or more of Human Security's seven fields (sidebar). The rising participation and activism in the security realm is a product of many factors. The number and type of major threats – clear and present, or imaginable, and the number of combinations of these threats has risen rapidly as advances in information technology increases awareness, connections and joint actions.

Strategic Foresight can shed new light on this deepening mess.

Foresight for Security Workshop will provide participants with:

- Encouragement and provocation to see and think differently about security and the future.
- Opportunities to openly share and explore security interests, concerns, experiences and opinions.
- A model for testing the outputs of your Security Foresight thinking.
- A hands and mind-on interactive experience.

Facilitation: Col. David Harries, (ret.) Ph.D., P Eng takes a global view of security and the future. As Deputy Commandant, National Defence College, Kingston, David studied the emerging future of over 50 countries. As Chief Engineer of the UN in Bosnia he put his ideas into practice. Today, David continues to teach civil-military relations for NATO. Most recently he facilitated a scenario-based exploration of a non-nuclear world for Pugwash International. David is Associate Executive Director of Foresight Canada, a board member of both the (Canadian) Global Initiatives Project and Proteus Canada and Assistant Coach of the RMC varsity men's Rugby programme.

Inquiries to:

Ruben Nelson
888-673-3537

foresightcanada@shaw.ca

Who Should Attend?

Security practitioners and stakeholders who also have an eye on the emerging future.

Persons who want time to see more fully and think more deeply about security affairs.

Persons from private, public and not-for-profit sectors, and First Nations communities.

Security's Five Domains

National Defence

Homeland Security

Public Safety

Response to Nature's Extremes

Preparation for Existential Catastrophe

Human Security's Seven* Sectors: Freedom from:

Disease

Hunger

Unemployment

Crime

Social conflict

Political repression

Environmental hazards

UNDP 2004 HDR*

Generations of War

GW1 – Massed Manpower

GW2 – Massed Firepower

GW3 – Manoeuvre

GW4 – Insurgency using any or all of political, economic, social and military means

GW5 – Cyber-War

GW6 – ???